Purple Cane Road (Dave Robicheaux Series #11) by James Lee ...

This is another workmanlike novel from Mr. Burke, and as such merits reading. That said, I admit that I'm feeling overexposed to Dave Robicheaux, just like the overexposure I eventually came to feel about Lew Archer, Travis McGee, Philip Marlowe and more recently Jack Reacher. "Purple Cane Road" is a good read.

Robicheaux first hears it from a pimp eager to trade information for his life: Mae Guillory was murdered outside a New Orleans nightclub by two cops. Dave Robicheaux was just a boy when his mother ran out on him and his whiskey-driven father. Now Robicheaux is a man, still haunted by her desertion and her death.

Purple Cane Road by James Lee Burke: Summary and reviews

Burke crafted another haunting tour de force with Purple Cane Road, not his latest Dave Robicheaux novel, but one of his best. It is laced with the poetic, evocative imagery and fully fleshed-out characters, often hacked from the seamiest strata of real life, that typify his work. And it sets the New Iberia detective o
